

World Hunger

Sunday

2.4 billion people around the world aren't sure whether they'll be able to feed their families today. But we can be part of God's great work of justice and mercy.

World Renew's World Hunger campaign is all about possibilities: the crops that conservation agriculture can yield, the funds that savings groups can help provide for an emergency, and the fruit that innovative techniques like aquaponics can grow.

*Plant hope
End hunger*

Maira, a participant and community trainer, told us about implementing aquaponics through World Renew: “Now we have access to infrastructure that allows us to grow fresh, high-quality vegetables any time because it’s a system that doesn’t require land or fertilizer. We just need water, fish, and plants. Our lives have improved because we have a balanced diet. We have fresh fish within reach and vegetables at the same time.”

A man wearing a grey cap and a green t-shirt is kneeling on a sandy beach, mending a white fishing net. He is looking intently at the net in his hands. The background shows lush green foliage and a bright, sunny day.

Lord, we believe that your desire is for every person you have created to have enough to eat and to know and share your love. May the gifts we offer and the work of World Renew be used by you and your faithful servants all over the world to change the story of hunger for good. Bless every family who has known hunger with your abundance and mercy. Amen.
